SOMETHING FOR EVERYONE!

THE TOWN OF DURBIN

The town of Durbin was started back in the late 1800's and soon the coming of the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad from the south and the Western Maryland Railroad from the north, turned this town into a busy rail head, and with it came a wild breed of men that worked the railroads and logged the fine spruce and hardwood timber of the area. The town once had several hotels, restaurants, stores and numerous drinking establishments, all of which did a thriving business. The coming of the sole leather tannery at nearby Frank, in 1902, added to the population of the area. Today, the railroads are gone, along with the rowdy crowds of the past. Durbin is now a quiet, peaceful town with a population of around 500. A few stores and other businesses are still around. One would not believe that such a small town could come alive like this one during "DURBIN DAYS CELEBRATION"

OLD DURBIN JAIL MUSEUM

While in town, be sure to visit the old town jail, which has been converted into a small museum. The jail, built around 1938, was apparently filled to capacity many Saturday nights, during the rowdy, boom days of the town. Loggers, railroaders and the general public converged on the town for a bit of celebration, and many spent the night in the "Lockup". Old leather bound ledgers containing the court dockets, dating back to 1902, show evidence of the many arrests and fines of the days gone by. The city policeman was apparently a busy person during these times.

The jail is a block building, with two cells and a larger holding area, and is located just off main street. Other exhibits include old pictures of the area and old policemen's equipment.

Come by and enjoy a small part of Durbin's history.
